NEW YORK--(BUSINESS WIRE)--Aug. 24, 2004--Bodisen Biotech, Inc., (stock symbol: BBOI, website: www.bodisen.com) announced today that the company's scientists have successfully developed a new environmentally friendly pesticide to treat Black Spot, a damaging bacteria that is harmful to fruit trees. Current methods to combat Black Spot, a worldwide problem afflicting tree crops, are not entirely effective in eradicating the tree disease.

Ms. Qiong Wang, Chairman of Bodisen commented, "Bodisen has developed an effective product that is demonstrating excellent results during field trials in eliminating Black Spot. Demand for this new pesticide is immediate as the agricultural community continues to request innovative technologies to service crop problems. We expect this high margin product to greatly contribute to our revenues and earnings annually."
